One week after celebrating his eightieth birthday anniversary, I. H. T. Rummel, battlefield guide here for forty years, died at his home on Carlisle street at 12:30 o'clock, Saturday morning, following a year's illness. After being about for the celebration of his birthday anniversary, Mr. Rummel began to fail in health until he died.

Mr. Rummel was born on the Rummel farm at the Cavalry shaft, east of Gettysburg, and worked on the farm during his earlier life. Too young to enlist during the civil war, he joined a wagon team, during the battle of Gettysburg, as a mascot. He remained with the army, although unenlisted, until he contracted typhoid fever, and returned home.

Mrs. Riffe was a daughter of George W. Andrew and Sophia Jane Wertz Andrew, deceased, and was born in Hamilton township. She lived the greater part of her married life in Littlestown, where with Mr. Riffe they conducted a hotel. After her husband's death, Mrs. Riffe conducted the National hotel for five years and then moved to Lancaster where she resided with her daughter, Mrs. Effie Rebert, who survives together with a son, Robert Riffe, of Hanover. Three brothers, William O. Andrew, of McKnightstown; James Andrew, of Hilltown; John Andrew, of Thorton, Iowa, and two sisters, Mrs. William Walter, of Chambersburg, and Mrs. Charles Little, of Gettysburg, also survive.

Mr. Slabaugh had not preached during recent years. Lately he has been working as chief clerk of the United States coast guard in Washington.

The Rev. Mr. Slabaugh is well known in this vicinity, having at one time served as superintendent of the public schools at Shippensburg, for a period of four years. Although he has not been preaching for some time, the Rev. Slabaugh has been active in the election of the Lutheran Church of Our Redeemer, the Keller Memorial Lutheran church and Saint Mark's Lutheran church, all of Washington, D. C., where he maintained his residence. He is said to have left the active ministry because of failing health.

AG. EXTENSION ASSOCIATION TO RETAIN OFFICERS

Meeting Is Held Saturday; Spray Service Is Outstanding Feature.

Directors of the Adams County Agricultural Extension association elected officers and discussed activities for the ensuing year at a meeting at the office of R. E. Underwood, farm agent, Saturday afternoon.

All former officers were re-elected, including Harry E. Brown, Fairfield, president; E. F. Strausbaugh, Gettysburg, vice president; John C. Broom, Gettysburg, secretary, and H. E. Hulick, New Oxford, treasurer.

Spray Service
The outstanding project of the association this year, one that is already under way, is the complete spray service for cooperating fruit growers. Timely spray news will be given the orchardists, who have signed up, as it is received from State college.

Under the plan by which the county is to be divided into five districts, the executive committee in each of the sections will call together local farm leaders to plan the program of activities for the year. A project leader in each district will be in charge of the various activities.

5 Local Leaders

On the county-wide basis there will be five local leaders for each of the extension activities and the needs of each community will be planned at district project meetings. By this system, it is hoped that a greater number of farmers can be helped with meetings and demonstrations than under the present plan. The centers of the five districts will be: Arendtsville, York Springs, Fairfield, Gettysburg and McSherrystown.

Directors present at the meeting were Harry E. Brown, E. F. Strausbaugh, R. M. Spangler, A. B. Knouse, A. I. Hostetter, A. B. C. Williams and John C. Broom.

1,068 PERSONS SEE AUTO SHOW

Attendance Figures 74 Below That Of Last Year, But Dealers Are Satisfied.

Gettysburg's fifth annual automobile show came to a close Saturday evening, with the total attendance 74 below that of the 1928 show, the number of paid admissions this year being 1068. Despite the drop in attendance, members of the Adams County Automobile Dealers' association said they were well pleased with the show.

Many of the exhibits were removed from the National garage annex, North Washington street, where the show opened last Wednesday, on Sunday, with the remainder removed today.

Number 642 was drawn for the electric radio set, the grand prize of the show. If the person, holding that number presents it to the H. and H. Machine shop before Tuesday evening, the radio set can be claimed. If the number is not presented before then, 744, the second number drawn, will be declared the winner, and the machine held until Thursday evening. If not called for by that time, the third number, 565, will win the set. Number 845 was drawn for the $2.50 door prize Saturday evening.

John Codori, Hupmobile dealer, today announced the sale of the specially-built 8-cylinder Hupmobile he had on display at the show.

Three Churches Plan to Merge Into United Union

Reformed, United Brethren In Christ And Evangelical Churches Of District Are Included In Plan To Unite Denominations; Plans Are Being Considered.

Members of Reformed, United Brethren in Christ and Evangelical churches in Gettysburg and Adams county are awaiting with considerable interest what is regarded as a feasible plan for a union of the three denominations now being worked out by Dr. George W. Richburg, president of the Reformed theological seminary, Lancaster. The plan will be announced in a few weeks.

Plans Are Prepared
Doctor Richards, who has had a prominent part in the merger project, said that the plans have been prepared by commissions of the churches involved and will be presented at the next general conferences. The first group to vote on the matter will be the United Brethren church which holds its general conference at Lancaster in May. The general synod of the Reformed church, meeting in Indianapolis, will consider the plan during the same month.

Each church will vote according to its own constitutional rules and, after two or three have approved the plan, each will appoint delegates to organize a joint body to be known as the United Churches in America.

One General Council
Under the plans for the union, all subordinate judiciaries or governing bodies of the denominations will continue as at present but the work now done by the supreme bodies of the separate churches will become the work of the general council of the united church. This will include, specifically, the work coming under the following heads: Foreign missions, home missions, education, publications, ministerial relief and benevolent activities.

The plan of union makes careful provisions for the property rights of the three churches although pointing out various ways in which economy of administration can be obtained. If approved by the three denominations, the union can be consummated within the next two years, bringing together a total membership of about 1,250,000.

SEEK TWO AFTER DILLSBURG MAN FALLS TO DEATH

York, Feb. 18 (AP).—Warrants have been issued for the arrest of two men who it is alleged sold liquor to David Speck, farmer, of near Dillsburg, who was killed in a fall Saturday night while under the influence of liquor. A local detective left this morning for Dillsburg to serve the warrants.

Speck, who was 49 years old, fell off a retaining wall, 4 feet high and fractured his skull.

FISHER GRANTS THREE RESPITES

Harrisburg, Feb. 18 (AP).—Respites were granted today by Governor Fisher staying the executions of Raymond Parker, James Parker and John H. Wilson, all of Erie county, from the week beginning February 25 to the week of March 4.

The respites were granted because of the postponement of the meeting of the board of pardons from February 19 to February 26.

The postponement was necessary because of the illness of Cyrus E. Woods, new attorney general in the Fisher cabinet.

The trio was convicted for killing Pellergrano Cocco in Erie during a robbery. A fourth participant in the murder, Joe B. Ware, received a life sentence.

STOCK REPORT

New York, Feb. 18 (AP).—Strong buying support came into the stock market over the week-end giving opening prices today a firm undertone. The call money renewal rate of 8 per cent was received with mixed effect on prices and a marked falling off in business. Some issues lost all their early gains and a few high priced stocks took a sharp drop.

HOUSE VOTES TO PAY LOCAL MAN $887 FOR DAMAGE

William H. Johns, of Gettysburg, is to receive $887 from the federal government, as the estimated cost of restoring certain of his lands to their former condition after being vacated by the United States army, which occupied the lands under leases from Mr. Johns in 1918, according to the provisions of a bill introduced by Congressman Franklin Manges, of the York-Adams district, which passed the House of Representatives Saturday.

The bill now goes to the Senate for its approval and from there to the White House for the president's signature.

The York congressman is optimistic that the bill will safely pass this session of Congress and restore to Mr. Johns the money he has awaited since 1918.

The army troops occupied Mr. Johns' land during the World War as a part of Camp Colt, and in the occupation so tore up the ground for sewerage and heating purposes that $887 authorized in Mr. Manges' bill was necessary to restore the land to its former condition.

RAISE PENSION OF WAR WIDOWS

Congress Passes Pension Bill; Coolidge Is Expected To Sign; 12 Benefited Here.

Pension increases for 12 widows of Civil war veterans living in Adams county are provided for in the omnibus pension bill passed Friday by the senate and adopted recently by the house of representatives. In order to become a law the measure needs only the president's signature. This is regarded as assured.

Widows who require constant medical attention and depend entirely upon their pensions for support will all receive increases to $50 monthly. In the first and largest omnibus bill on congress this year they were reported to the house committee on Invalid Pensions.

The Adams county widows benefiting by the bill are: Caroline Roth, 83, Biglerville, widow of George W. Roth; Elizabeth Taylor, 87, Iron Springs, R. D. 1, widow of William H. Taylor; Tillie Shilt, 84, McSherrystown, widow of James Shilt; Eliza J. Strasbaugh, 79, Fairfield, widow of William Strasbaugh; Caroline Robinson, 86, New Oxford, widow of James Robinson; Susan Horting, 85, Aspers, widow of George Horting; Genevieve Foreman, 80, Littlestown, widow of Edwin K. When the final work is completed the figures will be made public.

WOMAN SUFFERS SCALP INJURY IN AUTO CRASH

Son Also Receives Treatment When Auto Crashes Into Tree This Morning.

Mrs. E. Forrest Williams, of Duquesne, suffered a severe scalp injury and her son, Forrest R. Williams, proprietor of the Rose Garden tea room, along the Emmitsburg road, suffered lacerations on the head and arms when the automobile, driven by the woman's husband, crashed into a tree near the Franklin township consolidated school, near Cashtown, at 8 o'clock this morning.

Mrs. Williams was admitted as a patient to the Warner hospital. Her son was given treatment for his injuries at the hospital, after which he was discharged. The driver of the car escaped injury.

Officers Fixes Blame

According to Patrolman C. W. Achenbach, of the local sub-station of the state highway motor patrol, the accident was caused by Cecil Stover, of Arendtsville, principal of the consolidated school, turning off the Lincoln Highway at the school, without signalling his intention.

The Williamses were driving west on the highway, and the driver was about to pass the car, driven by Stover, when the Arendtsville man suddenly swung the machine to the left, according to the road officer. In an effort to avoid running into Mr. Stover's machine, Mr. Williams veered his car from the highway, and ran into a tree at the south side of the road.

Machine Is Damaged

More than half a crate of eggs in Williams' car was smashed. Williams' machine, which was damaged to the extent of $150 to $200, was towed to a local garage for repairs.

Mr. Stover was driving the car of Miss Evelyn Orner. With him at the time were Miss Mary Stover and Mrs. Lolita Charles.

Romeo Quiets Injured Babe After Crash

Romeo Capozzi, trainer at Gettysburg college, who has endeared himself to the students participating in athletics by his faithful and untiring service to sore muscles, bruises, wounds and what not, added several more friends to his already long list of "stand-bys," Saturday evening.

The Orange and Blue cagers were enroute to Carlisle for the Dickinson tilt. When the bus, in which they were riding, came to a halt at a railroad crossing, near Mt. Holly Springs, a large sedan crashed into the rear-end. Occupants of the machines escaped unhurt except "Buster," 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Evans, of Harrisburg, who was in the sedan. "Buster" suffered a cut on the chin when he was thrown against the back of the front seat.

More frightened than hurt, the youngster cried disconsolately. Romeo soothed his bag of tape, medicines and other paraphernalia, used when members of the team are injured, rushed to the sedan and in a few minutes had "Buster" "taped" across the chin, his tears dried and a broad smile across his little chubby face. Romeo turned the trick like magic, while the mother sat by amazed at the deft manner in which Romeo performed his good turn.

In a few minutes, the Bullet dribblers had straightened out the bumper of the sedan, which had been turned into the tires, by the impact of the crash, preventing the car from moving. The bus moved on its way and Mr. Evans continued on his way, grateful to the students and to Romeo.

The bus and sedan were only slightly damaged.

Gettysburg high school's Maroon and White cagers went on a rampage Saturday night, burying William Penn high of Harrisburg, 55-28. Once again a capacity crowd saw the local basketballers hang up one of their easiest wins of the year.

Led by Captain Joe Sadler, the Maroons outclassed their opponents in every department of the game. Sadler ran wild, hanging up 24 points, 18 of which were collected in the first half. Coach Wilsbach's clan never had a chance and the Martinmen hung up one of their highest scores of the season.

Shortly after the opening whistle, Warren tipped the ball through the hoop from a side shot. Shaffer, Watts and Stearns landed pretty shots that gave the visitors their only lead of the game which lasted but seconds. Captain Sadler opened up and soon the Martinmen were out in front. At the quarter the Maroons led 14-8.

The Orange and Black quintet switched lineups several times in the second period in a vain effort to stop Sadler who scored almost at will. A pair of fouls and a goal by Shaffer were the visitors' only points in this period which ended 28-12 with the Martinmen in front.

Kitzmiller and Warren started scoring in the third period, while Sadler was effectively stopped by the Wilsbach guards. The third period ended 43-20. The Maroons slowed up considerably in the last round but succeeded in bagging an even dozen points while Himes sent his team's total to 28.

By virtue of their victory the Maroons took undisputed possession of fourth place in the league. Coach Martin's team now has a winning streak of four straight and will seek their fifth straight on Wednesday when they meet Hanover high in the local gymnasium.

Captain Sadler's work was the highlight of the evening, but Kitzmiller, Warren, Wermick and Wilson each came in for their share of glory, every man playing a whirlwind game. Shaffer and Watts performed in good style for the visitors.

WHAT'S YOUR THEORY?
A Mystery Problem

Editor, The Times,
Gettysburg, Pa.

Dear Sir:
The cross-word puzzle, once our leading indoor sport, is gone. It is succeeded by the mystery problem, in which the contestants are given a set of clues, and offer their solutions to the mystery surrounding a murder, a holdup, or some other crime.

It is now in order to suggest explanations of the massacre in Chicago last week. The first theory advanced—a very elementary and puerile theory—was that the members of one gang, disguised as policemen, attempted to wipe out a rival gang of bootleggers. The next theory, which bears some earmarks of sophistication and cynicism, was that the murderers were real policemen, giving gangland a lesson by showing what happened to naughty gangs who did not pay their protection money.

To show that we are not timid, we will give you our theory. We believe that the whole affair was just an advertising stunt put on by the Chamber of Commerce. Stealthy rumors have been afoot of late, to the effect that Chicago is losing her old prestige in the little matter of crime. It has even been whispered that Philadelphia beat her last year. Naturally, patriotic boosters of Chicago could not permit things to come to such a pass. Of course, this is only our theory. So far as most of us are likely to find out, it is perhaps just as good as anybody else's theory.

Frosh And Sophs
Split Twin Bill

Emmitsburg, Feb. 18.—After trailing a 24 to 20 score at half time, the sophomore basketball team of St. Joseph's college rallied to win over the freshmen in the opening game of the inter-class series by the close score of 35 to 24. On three occasions in the second half the score was tied. With only a few seconds to play, Miss O'Rourke, who had been playing an excellent game, caged the winning basket. The Misses Carlin, Billinslea and Blankford also played well for the sophomores with the Misses Schondor, Barnett and Gable doing fine work for the freshmen.

In the second game of the series the freshmen defeated the sophomores 21 to 15. The first half was closely contested with the freshmen on the long end by a 15 to 12 score. Both teams put up a fine defensive game in the second half. The Misses McCarthy, Boyle and O'Connell starred for the freshmen while the Misses Richards, Galety and Otero did the best work for the sophomores.

BULLETS LOSE
LISTLESS GAME
TO DICKINSON

Referee Dayhoff Calls Forty Fouls On Both Clubs
During Contest;
20 Men Used.

A crippled Orange and Blue cage five lost to Dickinson Saturday night, in Carlisle, 31 to 22. Dickinson won because it outplayed the Bullets.

Harry Dalhoff had a day off and saw fit to call 40 fouls on both clubs, 21 on Gettysburg and 19 on Dickinson, what fans regarded as one of the most poorly directed basketball games ever staged in Carlisle.

For the first seven or eight minutes of the contest, the game loomed as a thriller. Both clubs were fighting hard, with the Bullets holding a slight margin. The Bream-coached aggregation missed the services of Haller, star forward, who is ill at the college infirmary, and Eddie Gulian, who cannot play in conference tilts. With these two stars out, the Bullets were unable to maintain their even, fast-stepping stride.

Referee Dayhoff then proceeded to call fouls, and call them he did. The least semblance of an infraction of the most rigid rules ever laid down for an indoor sport brought a penalty and when the second quarter opened Cramer, star forward of the Bullets, was disqualified for four personal fouls.

Later in the game, Anglemoyer, of the Bullets, was ejected for fouling. Several Dickinsonians were disqualified for personal fouls.

From the stand came loud boos for the official. Dayhoff won the razzes of the fair sized crowd. The majority of the time was consumed in permitting fouled opponents to attempt to cage the extra points. This slowed up the game considerably and the slightest spurt was broken by Referee Dayhoff who persisted in "calling them."

Twenty men were used during the game. Four technical fouls were called on Gettysburg players when they protested Dayhoff's strict calling of alleged fouls.

The protest registered by the majority of spectators present was the result of the strict enforcement of alleged fouls, which was the direct cause of a slow and listless game, the fans contend. "Basketball," according to a prominent follower of the sport, "has been ruined by strict rules, rigidly enforced by officials who persist in declaring fouls for the slightest offense, regardless of the intent, the cause or the attending result."

From many sections of the country, fans are protesting and in many instances the support of the fans has been turned to other sports and basketball is suffering financially, managers claim.

TWO BOYS WOUNDED
BY STRAY BULLET

Chambersburg—Two twelve year-old youths, Arthur Miller and Arthur Mitchell, were wounded by a stray .22 bullet Thursday evening between Third and Mt. Moriah streets, off Washington.

Guy High, 12 years old, was with Morey Worthington, a playmate, and they were playing with Worthington's gun. High fired a shot, he said, at random and the bullet struck Miller, passing through the left leg at the ankle, and lodged in Mitchell's right leg. Miller and Mitchell were not members of the High-Worthington group, and were some distance away.

YOUTH CONFESSES
STORE ROBBERIES

Chambersburg—George Jacobs, age 16 son of W. W. Jacobs, gave bail of $500 before Magistrate Miller, following his arrest for robbing the Angle grocery at Sedcon and Garfield streets. Bail was furnished by D. Ailday.

Seth Angle, one of the owners of the store reported to Police Chief Byers on Wednesday that his store was being robbed, he having missed groceries at intervals. On Wednesday night Angle, his brother and Police Lieut. Umberhocker hid about the premises but no one appeared. They watched again Thursday night and about 11:30 o'clock they saw Jacobs emerging from his home and, crossing the street, enter the store through a back cellar-way.

DURING DEBATE

Hagerstown—Two deputy sheriffs and three state policemen stood guard at the community hall at Downsville Thursday night while five debaters discussed the merits and disadvantages of laws providing for compulsory testing of cattle.

The officers went to the scene when it was reported that men had made threats against some of the speakers. Large crowds of persons came to Downsville from Pennsylvania and it was reported that the threats had been made by them. The crowd was the largest to attend a meeting in Downsville in many years and many of those who attended were unable to gain admittance to the building.

GASOLINE STATION
ROBBED OF 100 GALLONS

Waynesboro—When Thomas Motter, of Waynesboro, went to open the gasoline pumps at the Cash and Carry station, opposite the Pennsylvania railroad station at 6 a. m. Thursday, he discovered that the tanks had been broken.

A checkup revealed that approximately 100 gallons of gas had been taken from the pumps some time during the early morning.

The officials of the company are at a loss to determine the identity of the thieves. The station had been closed Wednesday at 9 p. m. and no suspicious characters were noticed in the neighborhood.

New padlocks are needed on the pumps as the thieves, in their efforts to get the gasoline, wrenched and practically ruined them.

SYNOPSIS

Arthur Faunce returns from an Antarctic expedition on which Simon Overton, the leader and Faunce's friend, was lost. Both men loved Diane Herford, but none Faunce proposes. Tortured by his memories, Faunce confesses to Dr. Gerry that, panic-stricken in a blizzard, he deserted Overton, not yet dead, and found rescue for himself. Unknown, Diane marries Faunce. One day while Faunce is away arranging for a new expedition, Overton returns. Inadvertently he reveals his love for Diane and tells her part of the true story. Then Faunce comes home and says that the expedition has been delayed for a time. Diane tells him of Overton's visit.

There was a sharp pause. Faunce met her gaze steadily for an instant longer, like a man who had been suddenly relieved of a terrible suspense.

"Yes, I know he's come back. I heard the details today; but I didn't know he was here. I suppose he came here to see—you?"

"He came up here to see his old aunt," she replied with another effort. "I met him accidentally in the woods, and he came here to tea this afternoon. He left a message for you."

"He said he wanted to see you, and would wait—until you came."

Faunce seemed to consider this

The door opened and Overton entered.

and weigh it carefully. Again she had a vague impression that he was relieved.

"If you'll excuse me, then, dear, I'll go to see him," he said at last.

She caught her breath quickly, a wild gleam leaping up in her heart.

Would Arthur be so ready to face Overton, so apparently eager to meet him, if he had been the one to forsake him? A feeling of intense relief swept over her, and she sank back weakly in her chair.

"He didn't tell me much about that awful time when he so nearly perished," she said slowly, choosing her words; "but what he said—horrible. I can't forget it!"

Faunce raised his eyes reluctantly to her face, and she saw a strange expression in them—an expression that baffled her.

"Such things aren't easy to describe, Diane. It's like anything else that's terrible and awe-inspiring—it leaves one speechless. There's something about the polar wastes that makes a man's soul numb and mute. I'll go over at once. I may be late, for we shall have a good deal to say. Don't sit up for me—you look tired."

"I hope you won't be too late. You're so restless, Arthur, and you sleep so little! I don't see how you live."

"I think I shall sleep tonight."

Again his tone had in it the suggestion of relief that had reassured her.

Faunce pursued his way along the road that led to Overton's stopping-place with a steadiness that would have amazed no one more than it amazed himself. He had come to the end of his rope; or, to change the analogy, the game was played out, he had lost, and he must pay.

In his own eyes he had become a thing so miserable and so dishonest that his daily life had been filled with exquisite torture. The love that had driven him on to make Diane his wife had, in the end, been only a knife to cut deeper into his quivering flesh. Every word of hers, every caress, every evidence of her character, had only served to reveal the light in which he would be sure to regard him if she knew the truth. If she did not know it now, she would know it tomorrow or the day after. It could not be long delayed; the end was close at hand.

As Faunce realized this, he drew a long breath. He was amazed to feel relief. In spite of all it meant to him, his first feeling had been almost one of dizziness, like a man from whom a weight has suddenly fallen, and who reels back light-headed and unable to adjust himself to the change in his equilibrium.

If Overton lived, Faunce was no longer responsible for his death. No man could brand him with the mark of Cain. He was liberated from the thing that had hung upon him as fearfully as the slaughtered abbatross once hung upon the neck of the Ancient Mariner.

Faunce climbed a sharp ascent, and, turning into a wider path, suddenly found himself before the house where Overton was visiting his old relative. As he rang and stood waiting, his apathy suddenly left him. Then the door opened, and he found himself asking for Overton. The servant, a gaunt, pale-faced woman, evidently an old standby, led him down a long, narrow hall to a portion of the house which had been added as unexpectedly and unreasonably as some perverse imp might add an extra wing to a chicken or a fifth leg to a cow.

The woman, preceding Faunce, opened a door and asked him to sit down and wait in the library while she went to announce his arrival to Overton. He entered reluctantly, aware of a brilliant light from the reading lamp on the low table in the center, and looked about him, glad of a few moments' added reprieve.

On the table, amid a litter of books and papers, an old pipe lay beside the open ink-well. Near it, lying open, was the book that Faunce himself had published, which contained the rescued sheets from Overton's diary and Faunce's frenzied efforts to patch together the broken record, to force one and two to make four.

The sight of it there, the evidence that Overton must have been reading his version of that fateful journey, affected Faunce deeply. He moved slowly to the table and looked down at the open page, sure before he saw it that it must be the one on which he had inscribed his own story of Overton's death—had lied, in black and white, to save himself from shame!

Yes, he was not mistaken—it was the very page, and a deep pencil-mark accentuated the most damning paragraph. He straightened himself with a sickening feeling of shame, and drew back, trying to steady himself.

At that moment he heard a step outside in the hall, and Overton entered, shut the door behind him, and stood looking at Faunce.

It seemed an interminable moment to Faunce that they stood thus, looking at each other. He had time to note the terrible change and waste in Overton's face—the face that had haunted him so long with the veil of frozen mist upon it, fixed and unconscious in its awful tranquility. Now that he saw it alive and hollowed with suffering, it gave him a strange feeling—or, rather, a confusion of feelings, in which relief was for the moment uppermost. However he had failed, however he had played the craven, the man lived, he had no death on his soul!

But his feeling of relief was succeeded by swift and overwhelming humiliation, which increased when Overton amazed him by advancing calmly across the room and holding out a hand.

"Well, Faunce, I'm glad you came—although I suppose you had very little wish to come!"

Faunce colored deeply, his hand falling away from Overton's with a growing feeling of shame.

"It was hard to come—for I don't know what to say. Indeed, there's nothing for me to say. I know, of course, what you think of me!"

The other man put this aside with a significant gesture of weariness.

"Let it go, Faunce—I'm tired of it. For a while I believed I hated you and reviled you in my thoughts; but afterward, looking back at it, I couldn't blame a man for wanting to live. That was, of course, the size of it."

Faunce, who had expected reproaches and condemnation, was staggered by Overton's attitude. He could not fathom it, and he tried to face it with a shrewdness and acumen that might cover his confusion and discover the other man's motives.

"I don't believe you feel like that!" he said harshly. "You can't! I've often pictured it to myself, and felt that in your place I should have cursed the man who left me. To use a sailor's phrase, you've taken a strange tack—what are you driving at? What do you want of me?"

Overton smiled a little grimly, but he opened a box of cigars and pushed them across the table.

"Have a cigar? Here's a light—we'll talk it over. I'm not driving at anything. I can only say—with truth—that having been so near death down there, and knowing the horror of it, I can understand that you wanted to live. It's merely an elemental instinct, anyway."

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEWS ADAMS

WALTER M. HILL

IN CHICAGO there is a man who, for something like 30 years or so, has made a happy living by gathering together rare and priceless books and selling them to those who loved them equally. (He once told me that he started with less than $500.)

But when he sells one of these precious volumes he always feels as though he has sold one of his "children." That is the kind of a man Walter M. Hill is.

One day, while I was having one of my rare visits with Mr.
Hill, a plain looking man came in to talk with him about a new book that he wanted to get. This man was a manufacturer of machinery of some sort, but for nearly 30 years he had been gathering one of the most marvelous collections of books about flowers and birds in existence. Many of his volumes are so rare that the great British Museum does not contain them. And I am told that his entire collection is worth near a million dollars! But such a happy man he seemed—making money by selling machinery and then turning much of it into the gold of beauty.
But he wouldn't think of buying one of his books without Mr.
Hill's aid.

In my own library rests many a treasure from the shelves of this dealer in books, and I hope that he feels that his "children" have been given a worthy home.

Long before I ever began to collect these treasures of mine,
I had heard of Walter Hill. Years ago my friend, the late H.
V. Jones, publisher of the Minneapolis Journal, used to tell me about him, and of his beauty of character and his squareness as a dealer. But if I had never bought a book from him, I should feel that I had enriched my life simply through contact with his personality, and his appreciation of the worth of those who have enriched the world with their product of thought and ideas!

I like to pay tribute to living men. It was either George Eliot or Helen Hunt Jackson who once said: "The realm of silence is large enough beyond the grave."

This isn't an advertisement for Mr. Hill. He doesn't need any. But I wish that ten times the number of people knew him and loved him as do now. That would make him happier.

Just to think of it, Mr. Hill trusts this writer for many treasures bought from him when I tell him frankly that it will be a long time before he gets his money! But then I guess it will all come out right in the end for he told me recently of how he trusted another man for nearly $5,000—when he as frankly told him that he was broke. But you see, he, too, was a lover of books. That makes a difference!

THE FUTURE

They builded for us who are dead
and gone, Hewed the timber and shaped the stone;
Made the roadways we travel on;
Gave us splendors to call our own.
Books were written that we might read;
Pictures painted for us to see.
What do we fashion to serve the need Of the men and women who are to be?

They delved for knowledge that we might know,
They braved the darkness to give us light;
They bent their backs to the spade
and hoe;
They fought that we may be spared the fight.
The world we found was the world
they'd made,
Soon it shall be our day to leave;
Have we bettered the roads they laid?
What from our hands shall the world receive?

Races die when they cease to toil, Nations fall when their best is done;
Each must better his patch of soil
And build for the ones who are coming on;
The next age starts where the last one stayed,
Youth picks up where Old Age
puts down,
Thus has ever been progress made.
What shall we gain for the world's renown?

Some new truths we have learned to write, Changed is the world from the ways of old;
Speech now flies with the speed of light, Almost mastered are heat and cold.
Beauty we've cherished and brought to flower,
And the age that follows shall start anew
Trebled in knowledge and trebled in power
To solve the problems we couldn't do.

Gettysburg, Feb. 17, 1854.

Oregon is so much increased in population that the subject of admission into the Union as a State is already talked of.

"Well, well," laughed Little Jack Rabbit, "here I am in Lapland!" and hopping out of his Magic Airship, he looked about him.

"Jump on my back and I'll take you to the Snow King," all of a sudden shouted a Reindeer.

"Another adventure," chuckled the little bunny, and without more ado, he nimbly hopped on the back of his newly found steed. Away sped the reindeer amid the whirling snowflakes and after a long, long time and a great, great way, he stopped at a small hut. The roof sloped right down to the ground and the door was so low that one had to crawl on all fours when going in or out. The only person at home was an old woman who was cooking fish over an oil lamp.

"Tis a long journey,—over 400 miles,—to the Snow King's Palace," the old woman explained, on learning from the reindeer that he was taking his bunny friend thither.
"But 'tis worth the time and trouble. The palace of the Snow King is a wonderful sight, and the beautiful blue lights which he turns every night are more wonderful than the colored fires on the Fourth of July in Rabbitville."

"Oh, oh!" cried the little bunny clapping his paws together. "This will be a great adventure for me."
"We had better be on our way," said the Reindeer, shaking his head to toss off a crown of snow that had settled on it while talking to the old woman from her doorstep.
So up again on his back hopped the nimble little bunny and away went the long horned steed at full speed.

On and on he went under the gleam of the blue Northern lights.
Soon the winds began to blow more fiercely, and the snowflakes seemed to be driven from every direction.
Sometimes they looked like armies with spears and guns, and sometimes they seemed like small white birds that bit one's cheeks with their tiny bills.

At last the reindeer stopped before the Snow King's Palace. The walls were made of drifted snow and the window panes of thin sheets of ice. The chandeliers that hung from the high ceilings were great icicles that glittered and sparkled, making the immense hall as bright as day.

In the center of a great room sat the Snow King, surrounded by a pack of howling wolves. Overhead, black ravens flew hither and thither, and the wind from the North Pole, blowing down the chimney, covered the floor with drifts of snow.

"A cold place," snorted the Reindeer, picking his way through the piles of drifted snow toward the throne, on which sat the Snow King, stroking his long white beard. On seeing through the whirling snowflakes the reindeer approaching, the Snow King shouted: "Make way for my visitors!"

The North Wind whistled down the flue

Or through the cracks like trumpets blew.

The wild wolves howled with might

STOP BAD BREATH

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.
Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.
Olive Tablets bring no griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.
Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after 20 years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with attendant bad breath.
Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take nightly for a week and note the effect. 15c, 30c, 60c. All Druggists.

ORRTANNA

Orrtanna.—Each of the yearly employes living on the tenant farms and homes of the Musselman Caning company, Orrtanna, Thursday, received a crate of choice oranges which were packed and shipped from an Orland orange grove, Florida, by Ivan Z. Musselman. Those receiving the fruit were Frank Yoder, Louis Shulley, Sidney Donaldson, Blair Hiesacker, of Orrtanna; John Cassat, Mountain Edge farm, and Elmer Mellinger, near McKnightstown. Mr. and Mrs. L. Z. Musselman have been spending the past several weeks in Florida, and report the oranges lay covering the ground, as plentiful as the apples do under the trees of his orchards.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pepple and son, James, of Waynesboro; Mrs. Lizzie Favorite, of Hagerstown; Mr. and Mrs. William D. Beaver, of New Cumberland and Mrs. A. M. Lochbaum, spent last Sunday afternoon with Mrs. Jennie Pepple, Mr. and Mrs. James Pepple and Mrs. Nellie Mayman, Orrtanna Route 1.

Mrs. Anna Nary, while helping her nephew, Melvin Nary, to put some wood in an adjoining building, slipped and fell striking her side and back so hard that she has been confined to her bed since that time. Dr. Ira Henderson, is the attending physician, Mrs. Ruth Arbrecast, her daughter, of Baltimore, is with her now.

Mrs. Margie Rothaupt, of Greencourt, and Mrs. John Hamilton, of Gettysburg, have returned to their homes after spending several days with their mother, Mrs. Anna Nary.

Miss Beiva Cook, of Cashtown, is spending some time as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. Z. Allen and family.

Mrs. A. M. Lochbaum and family, of Pine Crest farm, entertained at dinner Wednesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. James Pepple, Mrs. Nellie Hayman and Mrs. Jennie Pepple, Orrtanna, Route 1.

"DREAM OF LOVE"

Proclaimed by all the critics as being better than "OUR DANCING DAUGHTERS" with the same cast.

In "Dream of Love," a M. G. M. picture, Miss Crawford portrays the part of an actress and singer and appears in many pretty gowns.

She is introduced in the picture as a strolling singer who sings her way into the heart of a gallant young officer. In this sequence she wears a lovely costume consisting of a full graceful skirt worn with an elaborately embroidered linen blouse. Flowers are worn in her hair and earrings, necklace, and bracelets give the finishing touch to her costume.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsion of creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.
Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.
Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)
